

Corvus Corax

New live program "A thousand years of dance music".

"A thousand years of dance music". This MUST be celebrated - with Corvus Corax and their new concert program, which focuses on the diverse musical styles and traditions from the Middle Ages!

Mead horns will be wielded with the ancient Vikings, traditional rhythms from North Africa and Eastern European melodies will be played, and the footsteps of an Arabian world traveler will be followed.

With a combination of energetic and expressive instrumentals, as well as catchy songs, Corvus Corax will take the audience on a musical journey through different ages and cultures.

In doing so, Corvus Corax will not only rely on their already impressive repertoire from 35 years of creative work, but will also present "new" pieces. The accompanying album is already in the works.

The band's self-made bagpipes are a real highlight of the show and show the musicians' skill and passion. With their distinctive sound and the traditional craftsmanship that goes into each instrument, they will thrill the audience and get people dancing. Imposing drums and new, lovingly designed costumes provide an impressive visual backdrop.

The new live program "A Thousand Years of Dance Music" will be presented for the first time at Corvus Corax's annual pre-Christmas concerts in Berlin's Passion Church and will go on tour between Christmas and New Year. Further concerts and festival appearances for 2024 are in preparation.
